Heart ailment claims senior

Zeta Tau Alpha member dies

BETH WARREN
staff writer

The University lost a student, Anne Margaret McCrorey, a member of Zeta Tau Alpha, on Tuesday, Oct. 10.

After moving back to Clemson Friday with plans to stay for the semester, McCrorey, a 21-year-old senior, died in Greenville Memorial Hospital.

A heart infection kept her from attending classes this semester and pushed her graduation plans back to December, but she wanted to return to Clemson to be with her friends.

"I think she really just wanted to be normal again," said her friend and roommate, Nancy Bigby. "What she wanted most was to be back in Clemson."

She moved into her apartment Friday and attended the football game Saturday.

But Sunday she was not feeling well, Bigby said.

She was admitted to the hospital Monday where she passed away after surgery early Tuesday morning.

Maggi McCrorey

McCrorey was a senior accounting major from Rock Hill, S.C. She was a little sister to Kappa Alpha Order and served on Executive Council as Treasurer of her sorority.

"We are going to miss her very much," said Jennifer Lowe, ZTA president.

The sorority gathered Wednesday night with counselors to grieve and will wear black ribbons under their badge for three days in remembrance of Maggi, Lowe said.

Mandi Hays, the associate director of Student Development, said the University feels a great loss with the death of McCrorey.

"Maggi's death is very unfortunate," said Hays. Funeral services were Thursday at St. Paul's Episcopal Church in Fort Mill, S.C. A Remembrance Service will be held in Clemson today at 2 p.m. at Holy Trinity Parish on 193 Old Greenville Hwy.

In lieu of flowers, the sorority requests donations be sent to the Anne Margaret McCrorey Memorial Scholarship at P.O. Box 2218 University Station.

Police bill University for concert services

TYRONE WALKER AND ANN WIELGUS
head photographer and staff writer

The University was handed a bill from Clemson City police totaling $1,867 in overtime, from the Billy Joel/Elton John concert, and the University refuses to pay the bill.

Within the budget for the police department money is allotted to cover costs including such events as football games and other traditionally planned events; therefore, the University does not get a bill.

There is not, however, money set aside for special unplanned events.

Since the police department was not notified at the time the budget was made, they had no funds to pay the officers the overtime.

Link believes that the department also deserves payment because of the added strain it placed on them.

"Obviously, we have a difference of opinion," said Link. "Considering it was an event the University actively sought, I felt our time and expenses should be covered."

He believes that an event that warrants 60,000 people needs to be covered. "It was a large event," said Link, "and attracted a large number of people. We worked longer shifts. We did not have a choice."

The University believes that special events, such as this one, added a positive economic impact for all the businesses in Clemson.

According to the Greenville News, Vice President of Student Affairs, Almeda Jacks said "We look at [the concert] as a positive-the economic impact of people that came through the city."

The police does not understand why the municipality is allowed to charge for a University event, especially since they have not charged them before.

The issue was brought before the Clemson City Council and Mayor Larry Abernathy. Both parties agree with the city police.

According to the Greenville News, Abernathy said "I think if it's a traditional kind of event, then I think it's definitely our job to take care of our end of it."

They believe that traditional events should be covered by the city but do not think they should foot the bill for unplanned University events.

According to Link, city council members have sent a letter to Clemson President Deno Curris to express their dissatisfaction with the University for not paying the bill.

The University's suggestion for the problem was that in the future they can try to provide the Police Department with a schedule for all of the planned events in advance.

Since the police were not notified of the concert in time, they cannot afford to pay for overtime.

Alcohol Awareness kicked off

MARI LINN LOVE
news editor

Enjoying the college life includes friends, organizations, late night study sessions and parties.

However, parties at college often include alcohol and under-age drinking. Beginning Oct. 15, Clemson is holding Alcohol Awareness Week to promote fun without the use of alcohol.

On Sunday, there will be a mocktail mixer at 8 p.m. in the Palmetto Ballroom. Students will be able to take a "trip around the world" and enjoy free non-alcohol versions of their favorite drinks.

The University will offer several alcohol-free activities on Monday. Throughout the day, students can wear red ribbons to support low-risk drinking.

At noon, faculty, staff and students are invited to Edgar's to see how alcohol advertisements influence the public.

There will be a Walk For Life at 4 p.m. in front of the library. All those who participate will receive a free coozie. The walk is to support low-risk drinking.

A free tie dye sensation will be held Tuesday from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Activities take place in the Phantom Lot and students can bring their own item or a t-shirt will be provided to dye.

Moonlight milk and cookies will take place in the fraternity quad from 9 p.m. until after midnight. The snack break is free and everyone is welcome.

All day Wednesday in the Loggia, donations will be taken to help feed a hungry family.

Students are encouraged to donate their daily or weekly beer money to a worthy cause.

To end all of the events, Coca Cola, Pappa's John's Pizza and the band Groove Tramp will provide a great evening of free entertainment and food at Edgar's. The activities begin at 9 p.m. and will last well into the night.

Alcohol Awareness Week is designed to promote student awareness of the abuse of alcohol on college campuses.

All activities are free and open to all students who want to enjoy an alcohol-free week.

Friday the 13th superstitions and traditions at Clemson

Why do strange and unusual things tend to happen on Friday the 13th?

MARI LINN LOVE
news editor

As darkness falls across the Clemson campus on Friday the 13th, students should be warned of the lingering superstitions which haunt this University.

Did you know that a student who enters the Calhoun mansion will never graduate?

The plaque hanging from the base of the Thomas Green Clemson statue in front of Tillman has a long standing superstition. Any student who reads the words etched on the plaque will not graduate.

Benjamin Tillman lost his left eye due to disease as a young child. Somewhere on this campus, the lost left eye of Tillman is visible. The student who can find this place will have a year of great luck.

A kiss next to the reflection pond could seal a student's eternal love. A blessing would be given to the lovers by the mysterious green water.

While walking across campus, students should beware where they step. If a student walks on a senior sidewalk, he better not step a last name shared by him. If the student steps on his last name, he will not graduate.

The superstition of Friday the 13th was originally out of the fear of the day Friday. If a Friday falls on the 13th, a person's bad luck only increases. Fridays have been regarded as unlucky and monks of old used to fast on this day.

But there are things you should not do to improve your chances of a good day. You should never change your sheets on a Friday. If you wash your blanket on a Friday, the blanket will dry too quickly. You should never get a hair cut on Friday because it is considered unlucky.

Since there is a superstition with the number 13, highrises will avoid numbering the 13th floor.

There are also everyday superstitions which students need to be aware of. Never pick up a pair of scissors if anyone is in the room when you drop them. You should call for someone else to pick them up.

Candles are burned at the birth of a child to keep off evil spirits, at marriage to prevent the evil eye affecting the couple and at death to drive away the demons who are always on the look-out for the souls of dying men.

Have you had an itch recently and wonder what it meant? If the left palm of the hand itches, you will have to pay someone money.

If the sole of your foot itches, you will walk over strange ground. If the elbow itches, you will sleep in a bed with a stranger. If you shiver, someone is walking over the spot where you will be buried.

The superstition connected with the cracking of a mirror and seven years bad luck can be traced back to the days when there were no mirrors.

When Greek and Roman influences dominated Britain, women would bend over a pool to see their reflection. A rival of the women would throw a stone into the pool, to break the reflection of them.

The idea that a person should not walk under a ladder comes from the formation of a triangle the ladder creates. When the ladder leans against the wall, it forms a triangle and is symbolic of the Trinity.

If two people wash in the same water at the same time it brings bad luck. But there is an antidote: the first man should spit in the water and all will be well.

Be careful of all of the superstitions which surround this University and the unlucky day. If you are one of the few who do not believe in superstitions, remember that the ghost of John C. Calhoun still haunts the tunnels under the campus.

It is believed that the ghost rises out of the manholes at night and grabs people who pass by.

Blade club skates into action

MARI LINN LOVE
news editor

On the evenings you cannot study and stress is building up, Clemson now has a blading club so you can relieve all of your frustrations.

"We had a blading club at the University of Miami," said Mark Kreitz, president of the Clemson Blading Club. "I wanted to blade with friends and learn new stunts and techniques. As a transfer student, I also wanted to meet people."

But blading is more than just meeting new people. Blading seems to be the recent trend as a type of exercise. All over campus, there are students who blade to classes or blade as a type of entertainment.

Either way, Kreitz notes the ease of the sport.

"In our club, we have members who are beginners and who are extremists," said Kreitz. "All individuals are given equal amount of time for training. If you are not experienced, we spend time teaching you the basics."

Check Kirivong, vice-president of the club, also teaches and encourages everyone to participate.

"The blading club is more of a social atmosphere than just a strict club," said Kirivong. "We're out there to release stress and have a good time."

Tomorrow at noon, the blading club plans to hold a two-day competition. There will be several categories competing against each other, including male and female, with beginner and advanced levels.

The contest will consist of four events: slalom, high jump, low ride and free style. Prizes are sponsored by Tower & Atlantic Records. Students who are interested in the competition must call 858-7162 to enter if they are not a club member.

There are also plans to hold a high school clinic next semester to teach proper safety techniques.

There are currently 25 members, with no membership dues, and the only requirements are kneepads and wrist guards. Cost of equipment varies with the average price for pads costing $80 every six months. The average cost for blades is $175.

Blades may need to be replaced every year. Maintenance for the blades includes new wheels and bearings running $75 every six months. All prices depend on the how much a person blades.

The blading club meets every Tuesday and Thursday from 8 p.m. to 12 p.m.

Former California football player pleads guilty in murder case

LAS VEGAS (AP) - A former California State University, Fullerton football player has pleaded guilty to being an accessory to murder in helping cover up the slaying of his pregnant girlfriend last year in Las Vegas.

Twenty-one-year-old Anthony James admitted that he witnessed the shooting death of Amy Tuttle on May 27, 1994, and that he helped a friend lie about the incident.

James pleaded guilty Monday to being an accessory to murder. District Judge John McGroarty is scheduled to sentence him Nov. 16. As part of the plea bargain, the judge may impose a prison sentence of up to five years.

The defendant also agreed to testify at any court proceedings involving his co-defendant, 21-year-old Malcolm Gray.

Gray was convicted of second-degree murder on Friday.

Gray claimed he shot the 20-year-old victim accidentally after he put a gun to her head to stop an argument she was having with James.

Both defendants played football for Fullerton before their arrests in September 1994.

Tuttle was eight weeks pregnant when she died.

UNLV student critical-hurt trying to stop shoplifters

LAS VEGAS (AP) - A UNLV student remained in critical condition at University Medical Center Tuesday, suffering from head injuries sustained when she tried to stop a pack of rowdy teen-agers from shoplifting.

Lorraine Mosca, 23, was knocked to the pavement and hit her head after confronting one of the youths during the Saturday night fracas.

The incident occurred at a Warehouse record store when 15 to 20 teen-agers entered the store 10 minutes before it was to close.

Las Vegas police robbery Lt. Wayne Petersen said that the group of teens was described by witnesses as unruly and that the trouble began after one of the youths tried to pocket a compact disc.

When Mosca confronted the shoplifter, Petersen said, several others in the group began stealing merchandise. As she tried to prevent people from leaving, she was knocked to the ground and hit her head on the pavement, Petersen said.

Academic endowment tops $100 million

STAFF REPORTS

Clemson's academic endowment topped $100 million during the 1994-1995 fiscal year.

For the year ending June 30, a 21.67 percent return on investments by the Clemson Foundation helped boost the market value of the University's endowment assets to $112.7 million. The total for the year before was $86.7 million.

Endowment assets include private gifts that are invested to generate funds for specific purposes, such as scholarships, faculty support, particular academic departments or other such donor-designated programs.

Most of Clemson's endowment assets, $91.3 million, are held by the Clemson University Foundation and managed by its investment committee. The rest are held by the University and the state treasurer.

A committee of the Clemson University board of trustees reviewed the endowment figures Oct. 11 during a meeting in Columbia.

The committee was briefed on Clemson's fund-raising costs, which dropped 19 percent in 1994-1995.

The total of all University-wide expenses used to raise $28 million during the 1994-1995 fiscal year was just under $2.4 million.

That works out to 8.5 cents per dollar, down from 10.55 cents per dollar raised during the previous year.

"This reflects the efficiency and effectiveness of the fund-raising programs and operations in the college and the development office and the creativity and initiative of the various fundraising staffs," said Gary Ransdell, vice president for administration and advancement.

"These staffs and volunteers work hard and get results," said Ransdell. "As the numbers show, their efforts are making a big difference for Clemson."

The English department recently received a $180,000 award by the National Endowment for the Humanities (NEH). The endowment given to Clemson is one of the largest the NEH has ever given. The endowment is included to the year's figures.

Traffic routes shifted around construction

Race truly matters

Before and after O.J. Simpson's acquittal there were and still are differences of opinions with respect to his innocence. The differences are primarily along racial lines. A majority of blacks believe he was and is innocent of the charges while a majority of whites beg to differ.

Although the verdict has been rendered and the case against O.J. satisfied in the eyes of lady justice, it has shed bright light on the deep chasm between white and black America that has existed from since the formation of this country.

This light's reflections give America an opportunity to reexamine itself and be honest in realizing that race truly matters.

Not in the sense of racial justice, retribution or spite, but in the sense of perception—a difference in perception between the masses and the jurors and a perceptual difference between black and white America.

When white America sees a police car in its rear view mirror, it experiences comfort and security, while black America experiences fear and anxiety.

Unfortunately, while past experiences have conditioned black America to expect the worse for police, white America has been conditioned to expect the best.

When you examine these differences in learned behavior of whites and blacks, the foundation of the verdict comes into clearer focus.

Simpson's lawyers didn't use smoke and mirrors to deceive the jurors, they did what good lawyers do: construct a believable reality that matched the jurors' perceptions of the world.

Though difficult for many of us to accept, there is no absolute reality but only that which we create to make sense of our experiences.

Although reality is socially constructed, we are only blank slates at birth after which environmental influences determine our perception of the world.

Consequently, what and how we perceive the evidence in the Simpson case is founded upon experiences encountered in our daily environment.

For black America, past experiences suggest police are bad people because they have legacy of committing grave injustices against black people. As a result it did not take a leap of faith for them to arrive at the conclusion that the police may have acted in bad faith in the Simpson case.

Sir! The nuclear plant just exploded! What are we going to do?

CLEMSON POLICE

Um... well, send everyone out to calm the crowds, clean up the carnage, stuff like that... just send the bill to the University.

Editorial

Police not prepared for emergencies

Certainly everyone in Clemson was aware of the Billy Joel and Elton John concert at least weeks before it was performed in Death Valley this past April. Most people in Clemson and the surrounding areas prepared months in advance, but apparently someone forgot to tell the police department which claims not to have any money budgeted for this event.

That seems to be the only explanation the Clemson Police department has for sending the police bill for the event to the University. Chief Link has explained that he had no money in his department to pay for the extra help needed to cover the event. It is plausible that the police created their budget after the concert was scheduled, but even so, this illustrates a problem somewhere.

First, why did the police department have no contingency plan for emergencies in their budget? A bill under two thousand dollars should be easy for the department to cover—that is what it cost to monitor the 60,000 fans who attended the concert and the accompanying traffic they created, less than any football game played in Memorial Stadium.

A solution to pay this particular police bill might be to use the fines from just four of the 21 noise violations issued at $500 each. At least students would know that some of their money went to a worthy and necessary cause.

How can Link claim he doesn't have the money to pay for the bill when they've collected these thousands of dollars in fines? Does Link really expect the University to believe that he can't come up with $1,867 from the city's coffers?

Second, if they really didn't know about the concert far enough in advance to allocate funds, then isn't that saying that there is very poor communication between the city and the University? The Joint City University Council meets at least once a month—is it possible they forgot to talk about the event?

Whatever the case, the University will not and should not pick up this tab.

Our Position:
The University should not pick up the city's police tab.

This University-organized event brought 60,000 people to the Clemson area, a number large enough to suggest that the city more than made up for the police bill through additional tax revenue.

This also raises a question about emergencies in the area. If a significant emergency did arise, would Link send the bill to the University after his department did its job? Isn't the police department responsible, both financially and physically, for monitoring events like these? That is their job, right?

In short, the University carries the city of Clemson much too often as is. For example, the town has access to the fire and emergency services funded by the University.

Students should be pleased that University officials sent this bill back to Chief Johnson Link unpaid—student tuitions do enough for the city already. The fact is, Clemson wouldn't exist without the University—public officials would do well to remember that.

Extra study time rewarded

To the editor:

As we approach the middle of the fall semester, the time is appropriate to remind your readers, particularly your freshmen readers, of the economic value of every extra hour they spend studying.

Depending on the assumptions made, an extra hour of study is worth between $214/hour and $875/hour in constant dollar terms, at a minimum.

This estimate is based on assumptions of varying certainty. The least certain of these assumptions concerns the effects of hours of study on a graduate's GPR. The estimate assumes that a student who studies 3 hours per day, 7 days per week, in addition to class time, will graduate with a C average while a student studying for 3 extra hours per day, 7 days per week, will graduate with an A average.

The estimate also assumes a C student graduates into a $24,000/year position, while an A student graduates into a $36,000/year position. These salaries are based on data provided by packaging science graduates, all of whom have received initial job offers in the range $18,500-$40,000 or have been accepted in graduate school.

Assuming 15 weeks per semester, two semesters per academic year, the arithmetic is straightforward. Why the range, from $214/hour to $875/hour? The lower value assumes that all 4 years of study at Clemson determine a student's final GPR. The upper value assumes that it is the study habits established in one year, the freshman year, that are the determining factors.

Greek ignorance

First, let me apologize to Clemson University's Pi Kappa Phi Fraternity, Zeta Alpha chapter for my narrow thinking in Tuesday's column where I discussed my coming out. I am not a member of this chapter, but of the Eta Zeta chapter at Queens College. I am deeply sorry for any grief that I may have caused the brothers at Clemson's chapter.

I assumed that Clemson's students would read the column and understand that the story was about me and no one else, but I failed to recognize the immaturity and intolerance that pervades the Greek society here at Clemson. However, it is a fact that no fraternity on this campus, or anywhere else for that matter, discriminates against gays. It only shows the ignorance of those who do.

To all the Greeks personally, all I can say now is shame on you! Whether a brother or not, I deserve respect as a fellow Clemson student, and so does every single person here. The fact that any of you would go around making snide remarks about each other, or anyone else is down right despicable. A few Greeks have expressed that they are glad that I had the guts to be out at Clemson. If any of you think that there are no gays in your fraternity, then you are blind to the facts. Maybe you should think about what you do to your gay Greek brothers when you make comments that will offend them, even hurt them personally. That does not sound like a close knit group that the Greeks like to claim they are.

I am not apologizing for the ignorance that has been expressed as a result of my column, only for not mentioning that I was not affiliated with Clemson's Pi Kappas. That other fraternities would have the audacity to badmouth the Pi Kappas over such a truly trivial matter to most people is truly ridiculous. How I ever came to think that I would want to be considered a part of the Greek society is beyond my rational thinking. Next time I want friends, I will earn them, not buy them. Perhaps if most of you would get to know me before passing judgment, you might have a different opinion.

Laziness to blame for trash

To the editor:

Thank you for printing an article in the Sept. 29 edition about littering. The littering problem on campus is disheartening to me. I cannot understand why people throw their trash on the ground.

Last week, while I was sitting in front of Sirrine Hall, a student walked up, took out a pack of cigarettes, removed the cellophane wrapper and threw it on the ground. He smoked half of the cigarette and threw the other half on the ground. There was a garbage can just several feet away from this person, and he was too lazy to use it.

People like this have no decency or sense of responsibility. Maybe their parents never taught them how to properly dispose of trash. Now they're in college and supposedly adults. Can they not take responsibility for themselves now? Their actions do affect others.

It saddens me to see the school I attend and love covered in litter. If you care at all for your school or for the people around you, please throw your garbage in a garbage can and not on the ground.

Presidential leadership

To the editor:

Extra! Extra! The Clinton crime bill is working. It has successfully captured its first criminal. Vice President Al Gore's 16-year-old daughter was recently arrested by Maryland police for underage drinking.

This is the kind of presidential leadership this country needs to get the really dangerous criminals off the street.

UNO wants to remodel 8,100 square feet of the engineering building's classroom, class laboratory and office space. The proposal expected to be approved Wednesday also would add 750 square feet to an existing annex for additional classroom and faculty office space.

New university may hinge on adopting non-traditional program

RIO RANCHO (AP) - The creation of a branch of New Mexico Highlands University here will largely hinge on the school adopting a "nontraditional" curriculum.

In June, Highlands announced its intention to try to establish a college in Rio Rancho.

Since then, a group of school, city and private industry officials has been conducting feasibility studies to see what kind of school it would be.

One conclusion was that "If you were going to offer just the traditional kind of higher education-you already have that here," at University of New Mexico, said Jim Owen, the head of the feasibility studies.

Highlands President Selimo Rael agreed, saying curriculum will make or break the project.

A curriculum model is being considered that would offer "nontraditional" courses at the branch. Officials haven't released details of the model because it is not yet complete.

UNM researcher finds holes in supporter's story

ALBUQUERQUE (AP) - A report distributed by backers of a new county says a scaled-down county government would have $1.1 million left over after paying its bills.

A University of New Mexico researcher disputes the claim, however, and says some of the revenue projections in the report are flawed.

A measure approved by the state Legislature last year will allow South Valley residents to vote in November 1996 on whether to secede from Bernalillo County. Critics of the idea claim the county would have too small a tax base to provide services to its residents.

The report was distributed to several residents who attended a community festival in the South Valley on Sunday.

It's slant is obvious, beginning with an excerpt from the Declaration of Independence and continuing to tell citizens to "throw off" government that tries to keep them "under absolute despotism."

Kneel to Zod, ruler of the world

guest columnist

Okay, here's the situation. It's Superman II, and Superman has given up the superhero business to get a piece of ass and a really horrible one at that (I mean, she's already got smoker's wrinkles and she talks like that creepy old lady from The Goonies.) But why did he have to give up his powers? Whatever the reason, it works pretty good in the plot.

Okay, now flash forward. General Zod and his boys show up at the White House. The president surrenders. Fast forward again to the next day. Big headline on the Daily Planet: "President Surrenders to Zod." Well, what is up with that?

The United States has been defeated by an alien force, and the newspaper business is still going. As a matter of fact, ain't nothing changed. The good people of Metropolis are still going about their daily business. Traffic's running smoothly. The subways and buses are still running. People are still going to their jobs. Ma Bell has still got the ill communications. It's like total obliviousness. I mean, the United States is, in effect, no more. It's now Zodsville.

Hello, screenwriters, did you forget to take your vitamins? Did you forget your V8? If the president of the good ol' USA signed over the entire nation to a supercharged alien badboy, would everything stay the same? I mean, what about mass confusion, total anarchy?

I personally wouldn't go to work and punch my time card if the United States was now Zodsville. I'd probably go find somebody's crops and call them my own or live in the woods or something, at least until somebody got around to rounding up a militia.

And that brings me to another point, were the good people of the United States so jaded by Superman's presence, always knowing that he'd come through for them, that they didn't even try to take on Zod on their own? Were defense budget cuts a little too big that year since Superman was around? Was the military castrated or something?

Okay, my good friend Harum Scarum has just reminded me of something. The military might have been reluctant to fight Zod, but the citizens of Metropolis certainly weren't. Well, at least not until they saw Zod and his cronies kick the crap out of Superman.

Don't remember? Well, here's the scene. Superman shows up. Fights Zod in the middle of Times Square. Everybody's standing on the street, looking out skyscraper windows while this big uberbattle is going on, cheering and the like. Some fool is going to KFC to get dinner, Obliviousman #1. And some lady is pushing a stroller right through downtown Apocalypse, Obliviouswoman #1.

Then all of a sudden, Zod realizes that Superman really cares about these stupid citizens of Metropolis, so he starts blowing really hard. People are sliding backwards. Cars are going airborne. Some dude on rollerskates gets blown downstream. Another dude is in the middle of conference call on the side of the street, gets blown away, but still he's talking on the telephone.

Then, bang— Superman stops this bus. Hits wall. Everybody thinks he's dead. So some drunken lounge lizard grabs a stick and goes, "Let's get 'em. They just killed Superman." All of a sudden, a big mob gathers (oh no, those people have boards with nails in 'em).

Hello, people. Superman gets his ass kicked by superior superdudes, and these morons think that they can whoop Zod and SuperRainman and SuperHitler-as-woman (Think about it. If Hitler had been a woman, he would have looked just like this lady. And remember, I'm just talking facially here).

See what I'm getting at? What kind of idiots did these Hollywood people think we were? Well, apparently they thought that we were pretty stupid.

Then again, they were right since I didn't notice this crap until a decade and a half later. Ah, if I only had a brain.

'For Arts and the Bridges They Build'

Third annual FAALA gets underway this week

This year's Festival of African-American Literature and the Arts features the sounds of jazz and gospel, as well as theatre, exhibits and panel discussions tying in with the theme "For the arts and the bridges they build."

APRIL DUCKETT AND LONOA MURPHY
staff writers

Live performances of rhythm, gospel, drama and jazz will be giving life to the stage this week at the third annual Festival of African-American Literature and the Arts (FAALA) Oct. 11-15 at the Brooks Center for the Performing Arts.

"FAALA is renowned for its unique ability to bring people of all races and from different places together to enjoy, celebrate and embrace American culture," said Claudette Thomason, marketing and educational outreach director for performing arts and one of the coordinators of FAALA.

This year, FAALA will celebrate African-American culture with a teleconference, the Phillis Wheatley Repertory Theatre, a Dizzy Gillespie Memorial Concert by jazz pianist Marcus Roberts, a play featuring the rise and fall of Zora Neale Hurston, a performance by the Alvin Ailey Repertory Ensemble and a Gospel Showcase with Avis Graves.

On Wednesday, Oct. 11, students, faculty and members of the community participated in "Affirmative Action Under Siege: What's at Stake for Our Campuses, Careers & Communities?"

This video conference, broadcasted live via satellite from Washington, D.C., dealt with the real issues concerning affirmative action, such as whether minorities and women will be divided and conquered as elections draw closer, and if the California initiative can be defeated.

Fifty middle school, high school and college students from the Greenville area graced the audience with a dynamic musical performance Wednesday night. Till Victory Is Won traced the history of African-Americans from slavery through the civil rights era to present.

Marcus Roberts, born in Jacksonville, Fla., has been blind since the age of five. His band will resonate the sounds of jazz in a Dizzy Gillespie memorial concert Oct. 12 at 8 p.m. Along with the memorial, Robert's latest recording, "For Lovers," will be featured.

Friday, Oct. 13 at 8 p.m. the drama Zora Neale Hurston: A Theatrical Biography will be presented in the Brooks Center. Queen of the Harlem Renaissance, Zora Neale Hurston was a published novelist and essayist. Playwright Laurence Holder traces the life of Hurston from age 14 to her death.

Graves, founder of the Arts Education Theatre Company in Cleveland, Ohio, has presented concerts and clinics world wide, including Norway and Sweden.

The gospel clinic will begin Saturday morning at 9 a.m. Participants in the workshop will learn new songs and singing techniques to perform in a concert on Sunday, Oct. 15 at 4:30 p.m. Some participants include choirs from Clemson University, Winthrop University, Lander College, and area churches.

Zora comes to Brooks Center

■ Play presented tonight in Brooks Theatre as part of Festival of African-American Literature and the Arts

STAFF REPORTS

Zora Neale Hurston was intelligent and talented. She also was arrogant, hardheaded and opinionated.

These qualities made her a queen of the Harlem Renaissance and a social outcast.

The life of this African-American icon will come to the stage of the Brooks Center for the Performing Arts at Clemson University tonight at 8 p.m.

"Zora Neale Hurston: A Theatrical Biography" is presented as part of the Festival of African-American Literature and the Arts Oct. 11-15.

Playwright Laurence Holder traces the life of Hurston in a series of remembrances that show her leaving home at the age of 14 to be a maid with a traveling theatre show, graduating from Barnard College, and developing into a writer.

The play continues with her fame as a published novelist and essayist and her collaborations with Richard Wright and Langston Hughes.

Assassins lacks excitement, action

JEFF MCQUILLEN
staff critic

When director Richard Donner teams up with producer Joel Silver and makes a movie like Assassins, you would expect it to be exciting, action-packed and somewhat funny.

Anyone who has seen the Lethal Weapon movies knows that they can deliver such things.

Yet when watching Assassins, one can only wonder what became of that great movie-making style Donner and Silver have when they worked on this film.

This movie seems to be devoid of excitement. Devoid of action. As for being funny, there is some humor but not as much as you might expect.

As for the story, this movie does have one. It's not a bad story idea, but it's been done before and done better. Sylvester Stallone is Robert Rath, the best assassin in the business.

Rath is an assassin who develops morals and decides to retire from the business after making one last hit. For years Rath has felt guilty for killing his best friend, who just happened to be the best assassin at the time. You see, in this game, if you want to be number one you have to kill the top guy.

But Rath has a problem. He has to deal with a young rival named Bain (Antonio Banderas) who is not only after Rath's final contract but his number one title as well.

Bain looks up to Rath and has studied every hit Rath has done. But Bain's admiration for Rath will only go so far. Bain wants to be the top assassin around. He knows that if he wants to be the best, he has to kill Rath. Unfortunately for Rath, Bain has no problem in killing him.

So Rath must keep an eye out for Bain, which doesn't prove to be difficult. When Rath goes on his last job that entails a hit and obtaining a disk with some secret data, it just so happens that Bain is there for the same thing. As a result, Rath must team up with his hit, a woman named Electra (Julianne Moore). With the disk in their possession, Rath and Electra take off only to be hunted by Bain.

Electra isn't at all thrilled about teaming up with Rath. She works on her own. She isn't very trustful of Rath, especially given the fact that he is an assassin, but she has the disk and Bain will kill her to get it.

So she is able to put most of her distrust of Rath off to the side until she is out of danger. The rest of the film has Rath and Electra going up against Bain. This eventually results in a big showdown and what is supposed to be a surprise ending.

There are some good points to Assassins. First of all, the acting is quite good. Stallone gives a good performance and is well suited for his part, but it's Banderas and Moore who are really the ones to watch for. Banderas is perfect in the role of the villain. He has fun with the character and it shows in his performance.

Moore is delightful as the leather-clad Electra. She really works well with Stallone. There is also some good character development. You get a real good sense of what makes these people act the way they do.

Even with the good acting and character development, this movie falls short of the action-packed excitement that Donner brings to his other films.

Donner gives plenty of quality, but little else. Basically this movie is a long bore. If it were shorter it might have been better.

Whatever the case is, this movie is not worthy of the big screen like most Donner films are.

Wait for the video—it will be better and cheaper on the small screen.

Clockers moving

SHANE ROACH
staff critic

Acclaimed moviemaker Spike Lee has hit a new high with Clockers, the film version of Richard Price's lurid inner-city novel about young drug dealers, fractured families, and hard-nosed cops who, for some reason, give a damn.

Mekhi Phifer is Strike, a 20-year-old "clocker" who sells crack cocaine from the benches by his Brooklyn housing project. Strike and his cohorts work for Rodney (Delroy Lindo), a middle-aged local kingpin who runs his business out of a ratty pawn shop.

Strike is Rodney's golden boy, but he has to pay for his special treatment with special favors; he's asked to get rid of another young dealer who's been stealing from the boss.

When the dealer is seen a few minutes later lying perforated in front of the fast-food joint he managed, the only certain thing is that he's dead. Was the killer Strike, or his older brother Victor (Isaiah Washington)?

Victor, a straight-laced fellow working two jobs in an effort to move his wife and kids out of the projects, seems an unlikely suspect, but he goes to the police confessing and claiming self-defense. It sounds cut and dried enough, but Detective Rocco Klein (Harvey Keitel) doesn't buy it.

The underlying storyline in Clockers is essentially a multifaceted low-key mystery. If Strike is innocent as he claims, why does his story keep shifting? If Victor is innocent as everyone thinks, why does he stand by his confession? What makes Rodney turn so viciously against those he depends on? What will become of Tyrone, the neighborhood kid who starts hanging out with and mimicking Strike? When will the stress aggravate Strike's ulcer, causing him to spit up blood? Why does Rocco bother with all that he does for these folks anyway?

Strike and Rodney both do what they must to make it, but the elder's ways are totally opposite. Rodney is a superficially ingratiating, paternal man who is as cold and hard as a stone inside. Both men do excellent jobs portraying their characters, and there's even some buzz already about a supporting-actor Oscar nomination for Lindo.

Clockers is a rough film about rough people. It's brilliantly written and well acted, with often mesmerizing cinematography. You can't help but me moved to some sort of emotion, and for 99 cents at the Astro, what have you got to lose?

Artist Formally Known as Prince The Gold Experience

Warner Bros.

MICHAEL VAUGHN
staff critic

Hot spot: "Shhh"

Low

blow:

"Endorphinmachine"

Bottom line: A unique blend of sounds that offers a variety of listening pleasures.

The Artist Formally Known as Prince has done it again.

Just when you think he is near the end of his career, he releases another smash album. The Gold Experience is no exception. The Artist Formally Known as Prince returns to the Minneapolis sound that made him famous.

The first single, "The Most Beautiful Girl in the World," which was released in 1994, sets the tone for this album. This album does not linger in the past, but expands on the Artist Formally Known as Prince's musical talent.

This can be heard in the R&B love song "Shhh" that tells of his yearning for romance and lust.

Still, no artist can express his creativity like he does in his recent single "I Hate You," which tells of a courtroom trial paradox that puts desire against spite.

Among other interesting tracks are "Now," an up-tempo dance track, and "Gold," which goes wide-open on a guitar solo.

The album is an overall journey about feelings and life. There are six interludes which define The Gold Experience. If nothing else, this album is strictly raw and uncut but still fine-tuned to the listeners' enjoyment.

As with his previous albums, he has written and produced all of the songs. The Gold Experience is definitely worth adding to your music collection.

WESLEY RYAN

Hot spot: "Hit and Run Holiday"

Bottom line: A true adventure with an elaborate plot.

Palm trees, drugs, a '69 hot rod, condoms and a scantily-dressed attractive woman.

The cover immediately catches the attention of the viewers. It makes them wonder what they have in common.

The answers to this question can only be answered when you begin a journey that will last for more than 51 minutes and span over several days that are filled with ups and downs. Let's begin.

Overall the album could be described as a loaded gun and a stick of dynamite. It is filled with hard-hitting tunes that are explosive and hot. It is exciting and addictive.

For those of you who want to party until the wee hours of the morning, let down your hair and go some place you've never been, "Hit & Run Holiday" is definitely for you. It promises to begin your journey toward a fast paced lifestyle.

At the end of your long, tedious journey, you want to feel like it was well worth the trouble you went through to get there as the story (the last song) ends. You just want to sit back and let the wind run through your hair in the '69 hot rod. "Last Ride Out" definitely gives you a good feeling. It brings closure to the album and the story that the songs have told.

Maybe you'll be satisfied after going on this adventure with Thrill Kill Kult or maybe you'll do it (listen) again.

If you enjoyed it half as much as I enjoyed it, you'll press play almost the minute the CD ends.

Hot Spot: "Personalities"

Low Blow: "Fool"

Bottom Line: Catchy, music

Clemson's Cornbread (you may remember them as State of Disorder) are back again with their newest effort, Cornbread.

The songs on this album are funky, catchy and down to earth—you'll want to sing 'em in the shower.

"Personalities," the best track on the album, is explosive and intriguing. The lyrics stick with you all day.

"Wrongside" is equally fascinating. An eruption of drums brings in "123," then the bass line smoothes the song out, only to lead into Dan Watson's rough-edged voice, producing one terrific song.

This album is definitely worth picking up and listening to.

MEN'S SOCCER '95

Tigers try to make the long

Return to the Top

Clemson is trying to regain past National title glory.

JAY MARCOUX
assistant sports editor

The 1994 season was anything but a success for the Clemson men's soccer team. The Tigers placed sixth in the ACC and missed an opportunity to compete for the national championship in the NCAA playoffs. This year, however, things are different - and so is the head coach.

New head coach Trevor Adair has taken his Tigers to an 8-2-1 record so far this season and a 2-1 record in the ACC. Soccer America ranks the Tigers 4th in the nation this week going into Sunday's game at Virginia.

Clemson soccer broke ground in 1967 when the Tigers, coached by Dr. I.M. Ibrahim, played their first match in Greenville, SC in a 4-0 victory over Furman.

This eventually led to the years between 1972 and 1980, where the Tigers were undefeated in ACC play. Clemson compiled a 40-0-2 record against ACC opponents until Duke knocked off Clemson in a 3-1 victory on September 28, 1980.

Panthers search for win

ASSOCIATED PRESS

ROCK HILL, S.C. (AP) - Five games into their inaugural NFL season, the Carolina Panthers are still winless, and coach Dom Capers is still smiling.

"There is a ray of sunlight there somewhere. We've just got to find it," Capers said Monday as he assessed the Panthers' 31-27 loss at Chicago a day earlier.

Throughout Carolina's rough start, Capers has demonstrated a knack for coming up with statistics that can make even dark predicaments seem full of hope. It was no different at his regular Monday meeting with his players.

For starters, Capers told the Panthers that their first five opponents have a combined record of 19-7. Then he pointed out that the Panthers had solid chances to win three of those five contests, including the game against the Bears, when Carolina blew leads of 10-7, 20-17 and 27-24.

And, if his players needed further convincing that their time to win may be upon them, Capers noted that the team's next three opponents - the New York Jets, New Orleans and New Orleans - see CONFIDENCE, 13A

Swimmers dive into new season

staff writer

The Clemson Swimming team will open its season tomorrow with a meet against the University of Maryland and UNC at Chapel Hill, N.C.

"A great year is expected," said Bruce Marchionda, Clemson's head swimming coach. "The coaching staff is extremely excited."

For Marchionda, the 1994-1995 season was a transition year.

"Last year was my first year as head coach," he said. "We now have a great freshman class and a very strong nucleus of swimmers and divers returning. Their attitude and work ethic is at an all-time high."

Marchionda is aiming for top 15 in the country and an ACC Championship win. UNC has won the ACC for the last two years.

Last season, the women finished fourth in ACC competion and the men fifth.

"Swimming is one of the most demanding sports," said Marchionda. "Our kids are very good and they want to improve on last year."

"There are two ways to improve - make their training more efficient and work hard."

The swim team is in the water by 6 a.m. Marchionda and again in the afternoon for another two hours. Out-of-water training includes abdominal work, weight training and running stadiums.

While Marchionda describes the swimming facilities at Clemson as being very nice, he does note the need for a full length pool.

"Most teams have 50-meter facilities, and we don't," said Marchionda. "But facilities don't make the program—the people and the training do."

Humphrey released

MICHAEL BURNS
editor in chief

Team Physician Byron Harder announced this week that cornerback Andre Humphrey was released from a hospital Wednesday where he has been treated for a chemical imbalance that he stressed was unrelated to use of "illicit drugs."

Humphrey, Clemson's career leader in kickoff return yardage, was taken to the hospital after police investigated a disturbance in a Calhoun Court apartment on Sept. 27. Humphrey allegedly broke an apartment window and caused $900 worth of damage to property listed as belonging to fellow football player Rudy Currie.

Tiger football coach Tommy West was unavailable for comment Wednesday night, but according to Harder, Humphrey's priorities will be academics for now, not football.

"Andre will return to campus next week and begin working to catch up academically before any plans are made for active participation on the football team," Harder said. "After an absence of two weeks, his academics must be the first priority."

Prior to missing the N.C. State game on Sept. 30, Humphrey had played in 38 straight games over a span of four years.

He has 12 tackles and six kickoff returns for 113 yards in four games this season.

Harris, Tigers punish Erskine

XAVIERA L. McRAE
staff writer

The Tiger soccer team clipped the wings of Erskine's Flying Fleet Wednesday, defeating them 4-1 on Riggs Field.

Both teams started slowly, but gained energy quickly. Erskine's defense picked up, keeping the Tigers at bay. Erskine's goalie, Jeb Huckabee, blocked several close attempts made by Clemson. But 9:23 minutes into the match, Miles Joseph, assisted by Wolde Harris and Tony Williams, slipped one by Erskine's goalie, giving the Tigers a 1-0 lead.

The Tigers suddenly experienced problems with their transition, and what seemed like seconds later, Erskine's Paul Prescott, assisted by Jonathan Lake, scored their first goal, tying the game 1-1.

But Clemson's defense never allowed its opponent to strike again. "We kept the pressure on them," Coach Trevor Adair said, "and that is what you have to do. Once we scored the second goal, we learned from our mistake. We had a mental lapse, and we didn't get back down to their goal. We kept coming after them and that is what you have to do." Clemson led going into halftime 3-1.

Erskine never saw daylight in the second half. Clemson exploded, quickly scoring their fourth goal. Harris, assisted by Craig Wenning, scored his third goal of the night, his 14th this season. He also scored the second and third goals assisted by Danny Care and Imad Baba respectively.

Now all Clemson needed to do was to keep the Fleet away from their goal, and they did. Clemson defeated Erskine 4-1.

That last goal placed Wolde Harris in second place in Clemson's all-time career scoring rankings. He needs just six more to break Nnambi Nwokocha's record of 74 goals during the 1979-82 seasons. Harris presently has 69.

When asked about this achievement, Harris said, "I really don't think about it. I just come out and play. If I break the record, I do. If I don't, then I don't. That's file photo

Wolde Harris (No. 10) needs only six more goals to break Nnambi Nwokocha's career record of 74.

how I see it."

Adair commented on his night's performance, "I was happy with the performance of Wolde tonight. He was much more in sync. He was much more in tune with the other players, worked hard, and it resulted in three goals."

As of October 10, Clemson's ranking in the Soccer America poll is fourth. Their ranking in the ISAA poll is seventh.

The Tiger's next opponent will be top-ranked Virginia Sunday afternoon in Charlottesville VA.

Simmons earns ACC honors

KEVIN BRIDGES
staff writer

Tiger linebacker Anthony Simmons was voted rookie-of-the-week Monday for the second time this season for his performance against Georgia. Simmons had 17 tackles against the Bulldogs, the highest total for a true freshman in Clemson history.

He was credited with 11 first hits and six assists. Simmons needs only four tackles to establish an all-time Clemson freshman record.

North Carolina boasted three of the six Atlantic Coast Conference players-of-the-week. The three picked were Jeff Saturday, Greg Ellis and Omar Brown.

Saturday, who was chosen as an offensive lineman, did not allow a sack in North Carolina's 41 passing attempts and graded out at 90 percent.

Ellis, who received defensive line honors, had seven solo stops and four assists.

He also had three sacks which totaled 21 yards and caused a fumble.

Brown was selected as defensive back. He was credited with four solo tackles and three assists.

The other two players chosen in the voting were Donnie Davis of Georgia Tech and Sean Liss of Florida State.

Davis was selected as the offensive back.

He became the first quarterback in Georgia Tech history to record over 100 yards in both passing and rushing in the same game. Davis rushed for a career-high 103 yards and passed for 206.

Liss, who was selected as the specialist, punted four times for a 50-yard average against Miami.

His longest punt was for 62 yards, which is his career high.

Terps' plan backfires

ASSOCIATED PRESS

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. - Maryland's quarterback plan was supposed to work.

Brian Cummings, a virtually untested sophomore, would spend the first four games of the season filling in for Scott Milanovich.

A senior set on holding most of the school's major passing records before he leaves, Milanovich was ordered by the NCAA to serve a four-game suspension for making small wagers on basketball games.

When his suspension was over, Milanovich would take over, finish his career and turn the job over to Cummings. It now has backfired, and coach Mark Duffner has set the stage for a sea of second-guessing.

Cummings became an instant fan favorite by leading the Terrapins to their first 4-0 start since 1978. After Milanovich completed just 5 of 12 passes for 33 yards on the Terrapins' first four possessions, Cummings went in and completed 20 of 30 passes for 222 yards to rally Maryland (5-1, 3-1 Atlantic Coast Conference).

Report

Big win for UNC

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) - North Carolina has had problems looking ahead the past few seasons. Now, the Tar Heels must refrain from looking behind.

Three straight wins, including Saturday's 22-17 upset of No. 19 Virginia, have followed an 0-2 start that was filled with a flurry of turnovers and offensive frustration.

"I was in the locker room thinking about the first two games and it's really going to spite us if we finish the rest of the season off as we're playing right now," said defensive tackle Marcus Jones. "We'll look back and see those first two games and just be disgusted with ourselves."

The Tar Heels came into the Virginia game with a minus-13 turnover ratio, but turned the ball over only once.

"If it did any good at all you could look back, but it doesn't," said North Carolina coach Mack Brown.

Davis helps Tech turnaround

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) - Donnie Davis has the spot to see Georgia Tech football return to respectability-on the field, in the pocket.

Davis completed 12 of 18 passes for 206 yards and a pair of touchdowns as the Yellow Jackets beat Duke 37-21 on Saturday to climb above .500 both overall and in the ACC.

Davis not only produced a good passing game against Duke, but also ran for 103 yards. It was the first time in modern Yellow Jacket football that a quarterback topped 100 yards in rushing and passing in the same game.

State foursome plead guilty

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) - Four North Carolina State football players pleaded guilty Monday to misdemeanor trespassing charges after breaking down the front door of a Wolfpack basketball player's apartment.

Charges against a fifth football player, offensive tackle Lamont McCauley, were dropped.

Linebacker Duan Everett pleaded guilty to simple assault and trespassing. He was given a 45-day suspended sentence and one year of supervised probation. Free safety James Walker and defensive lineman Mike Harrison pleaded guilty to first-degree trespassing and were sentenced to 75 hours of community service and restitution. Cornerback Ricky Bell pleaded guilty to trespassing. He was sentenced to 75 hours of community service and ordered to pay restitution.

"Mr. Everett has a harsher sentence than the rest of them - as it should be because he's the one who committed an assault," said assistant district attorney Andy Sandman. "The rest of them didn't participate to the degree that Mr. Everett did."

Diamond Tigers work through offseason for immediate honors, future benefits

While much of Clemson's College World Series team spent the summer thumbing through draft pick predictions, Gary Burnham and Doug Livingston spent their vacation gaining experience for next year by playing in the Cape Cod League, a summer league for college juniors and seniors where the bats are wooden.

Burnham was named to the Ocean Spray Cape Cod League All-Star Team. A left-fielder for the Orleans Cardinals, Burnham hit .284 with four homers, a double and a triple. He scored 22 runs and led his team to the playoffs.

Livingston was near the top of the league with 15 stolen bases and played a sparkling second base. His sacrifice fly drove in the winning run in the league championship game.

Burnham, a sophomore from South Windsor, Conn., has made quite a record for himself since coming to Clemson. He joined third-baseman Paul Galloway as the only Tiger to make the All-ACC Tournament and the All-East Regional team.

"It was a nice honor

because fortunately we won, which meant we won the East Regionals and went to Omaha," said Burnham.

He has a career batting average of .333 and has started every game he has ever played at Clemson. Last year, in the postseason, he had a batting average of .396. He also had 15 RBI's in 12 postseason games.

Burnham hit one of two Tiger grand slams last season at Georgia Southern when he hit a shot to right center and it hit the top of the wall and bounced over.

"It was no big deal," Burnham said. "It was just nice that the bases were loaded."

Last year he batted a .375 with two RBI's in the College World Series.

"The College World Series is an experience that every college player should strive for because there's really no better feeling," said Burnham.

He was named Clemson's top hitter last year as well as third team All-American by the American Baseball Writer's Association.

In 1994, he suffered a knee injury, but unfortunately he had played two games too many to be red-shirted. In 1993, he was selected as the 22nd-round draft pick for the Cubs.

Coach Jack Leggett has a lot of praise for Burnham.

"Gary has worked extremely hard coming off a tough knee injury last year and deserves to have great things happen to him this year," said Leggett.

"He is a real strong left-handed hitter and without a doubt he will help us a great deal offensively. If hard work is any indication about what kind of player he will be, then he will be outstanding."

Livingston, a junior from Thonotosasse, Fla., was an All-American honorable mention last year and the Southern Division MVP, in 1994.

He is currently Clemson's second leading hitter in the NCAA's with a .348 batting average.

Livingston scored two runs in the 1995 College World Series. He also had 10 sacrifices last season to set a Clemson record.

He transferred from Faulkner State with the school record for most career hits (134), RBI's (75), games played (108) and at-bats (338). He also was named all-division in 1993 and 1994, all-conference and team MVP in 1994.

Livingston feels that at Faulkner State he made a smooth transition to the next level.

"I was able to make an adjustment from high school to college ball and I had a great coach [there]," said Livingston.

According to Livingston, one of the greatest things about coming to Clemson was seeing the team go all the way to the World Series and starting at second base.

Leggett complemented Livingston's play.

Coach Jack Leggett credits Doug Livingston's effort for his consistent success.

"Doug is a real scrappy, hard nose type second baseman who turns the double play extremely well," said Leggett. "He is a very exciting offensive player with the bat and running the bases. He sets a good example every time he takes the field because he always gives 100 percent."

England - are a combined 2-14.

After the meeting, safety Brett Maxie was smiling and shaking his head.

"He's good at those stats, man," Maxie said. "It kind of lifted everybody up a little, which is what a head coach is supposed to do."

Capers said there's a simple reason why he continually chooses to accentuate the positives.

"To go in and yell and scream and get upset, you accomplish nothing," he said. "We know that what we're doing is good."

What they've been doing is playing nothing but teams with winning records. That changes with Sunday's game against the Jets (1-5).

While Maxie said it's tempting to look at Sunday as a solid chance for a Carolina victory, he noted that the Panthers probably aren't alone in employing such an assessment of the game.

"I'm sure they're doing the same thing," Maxie said of the Jets. "They're looking at an 0-5 team."

Carolina's offense reversed one trend against the Bears - turning the ball over repeatedly. But the Panthers' defense continued another trend - surrendering crucial yards at inopportune times.

In their previous two games, the Panthers had 11 turnovers, but Sunday, they had just one turnover - Kerry Collins' long desperation pass was intercepted by the Bears with 21 seconds left.

Comeback from controversy

This didn't prevent the Tigers from improving, however. Clemson claimed two national titles in a four-year span. The 1984 national championship team finished with a 22-4 overall record and finished with a ninth place ranking according to Soccer America.

The 1987 team had just a 1-4-1 record against ACC competition, but pulled together an 18-5-1 overall record as well as taking the national title for the second time.

Clemson soccer seemed to take a short fall last year surrounding suspensions of Wolde Harris and coach I.M. Ibrahim which led to the hiring of coach Adair.

Clemson soccer has seemed to take steps towards the former greatness of the past teams of the 1980's. The current record indicates a team on the rise at 8-2-1.

Clemson's win over Erskine Wednesday night was the 25th win in a 26-game series between the two teams. The Erskine game was a chance to sharpen up for the upcoming ACC game in Charlottesville with the Cavaliers.

"I think we clicked a little bit offensively, and we haven't been doing that all season," said Adair after the victory.

"There was more mobility and movement. I thought we came out dominating and had a mental lapse and gave up a goal right away. That's something this team is trying to deal with..."

"They showed a lot of character coming back after the goal, and I was happy to see that."

Composure is one important aspect of the game that will be the tell-tale sign of whether or not the Clemson soccer team is capable of beating an ACC powerhouse like Virginia, and eventually compete for a national title.

"We continued to keep the pressure on them, and that's what you have to do to win," added Adair.

Though Wednesday night's victory was against an unranked team, the Clemson team displayed the same offensive and defensive poise they showed in earlier ACC road victories against North Carolina and N.C. State.

Last Sunday's overtime victory against UNC-Charlotte in Riggs Field and the overtime victory at UNC proved that this year's Clemson team has the endurance and capability to win big games.

And it's no secret winning big games is the key to the return of the glory of Clemson soccer.

PRINCIPLES of SOUND RETIREMENT INVESTING

RECENTLY, MORNINGSTAR CALLED US CHEAP. IT'S NOT EVERY DAY YOU GET A COMPLIMENT LIKE THAT.

All financial companies charge operating fees and expenses — some more than others. Of course, the lower the expenses you pay, the better. That way more of your money goes where it should — towards building a comfortable future.

We make low expenses a high priority.

Because of our size and our exclusive focus on serving the needs of educational and research communities, TIAA-CREF's costs are among the lowest in the insurance and mutual funds industries.<sup>1</sup>

In fact, Morningstar, Inc. — one of the nation's leading sources of variable annuity and mutual fund information — says, "Size isn't a constraint; it... enables CREF to realize a remarkable economy of scale."<sup>2</sup> According to Morningstar's data, CREF's "minuscule" 0.31% average fund expense charge was less than half that charged by comparable funds.<sup>3</sup>

TIAA's traditional annuity also charges no fees

aside from a very modest operating expense of 1/4 of 1% of annuity assets. Interest and dividends are reported after all operating costs have been deducted. Standard & Poor's calls TIAA's costs "exceptionally low."<sup>4</sup>

Of course, expenses are only one factor to consider when you make an investment decision. While we're committed to keeping our expenses down, we spare nothing in trying to provide top-quality investment choices, financial expertise, and personal service. Because that can make a difference in the long run, too.

TIAA-CREF seeks performance, not profit.

At TIAA-CREF, we believe people would like to spend more on retirement, not on their retirement company. If you'd like to see how our approach can help keep more of your money working for you, call us at 1 800 842-2776 (8 a.m. to 11 p.m. ET, weekdays). We'd consider it a compliment.

Ensuring the future for those who shape it.™

TIAA-CREF expenses are subject to change and are not guaranteed for the future. CREF is a variable annuity and its returns are not guaranteed. The value of your investment can go up or down, no matter what expense levels are. CREF certificates are distributed by TIAA-CREF Individual and Institutional Services.
